New in Claude Code: your sessions can now message each other.

Instead of having to re-explain yourself in another session, you can now tell Claude to do it. It sends a summary (not your history or files), and the other session picks it up mid-task.

It goes both ways: you can also ask another session a question and get the answer back in your active session.

Claude can also message another session on its own, e.g. when a change it just made affects what that session is working on.
