Предыстория

In their 2004 conflict against the government of Yemeni president Ali Abdullah Saleh, the Houthis accused Saudi Arabia of pressuring Saleh to crack down on their community, and of funding him with 25 billion USD. This accusation was denied by Saleh, and was not acknowledged by Saudi Arabia. The Houthis and pro-Houthi Yemeni Army units first deployed teams equipped with anti-tank guided missiles (ATGMs) to attack specific vehicles or bunkers. BM-21s and BM-27s would then target military bases and lay landmines along routes connecting with the Saudi Arabia–Yemen border. Meanwhile, pro-Houthi special forces would assault the border outposts, while motorcycle mounted teams armed with RPG-7s and US-made M47 Dragons infiltrated the Saudi rear. Columns of Saudi Arabian Army (RSLF) forces drive into unknown minefields and ambush places not directly hit by the fighting. Some raiding parties deployed into Saudi Arabia were armed with portable air defense systems (MANPADS), as well as M167 Vulcan towed anti-aircraft cannons. In the first year of the war, they damaged numerous attack helicopters of the RSLF and the Royal Saudi Navy (RSNF), forcing their crews to keep their distance.^[28]

Conflict

2015

As a result of the Saudi-led intervention in Yemen, the Houthis shelled the Saudi city of Najran on 5 May 2015. Saudi authorities temporarily closed local schools, and the Najran Regional Airport.^[29]
